Crossing the Bar

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

For though from out
 our bourn of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far
I hope to see my Pilot
 face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

O, deem not they are blest alone
Whose lives a peaceful tenor keep;

The Power who pities man has shown
A blessing for the eyes that weep.

Coin offers grandfather's rules of thumb for planting

By KEN COIN

When I was a kid I remember many discussions over Grandma's dinner table of subjects way beyond my grasp but one of the hardest for me to fathom was the idea of planting by the moon. I was such a moron, I actually thought my great-grandfather went out after dark to plow and plant. It was only in more recent years, after making a complete fool of myself, that I realized the rules of planting by the moon applied to the phases of the moon and that the planting actually took place during daylight hours. He was an excellent farmer and someone paid him a great compliment once by telling me, "Carl was the best farmer I ever worked for. He not only knew all the rules of planting by the moon but he also knew when the moon was wrong."

Once I got it all sorted out I wrote down "Carl Staub's Rules for Planting by the Moon." (Not to be confused with "Planting in the Dark.")

1. Plant beans when the horns of the moon point upward. No climbing plants should be sowed when the horns point down.

2. Plant peas in the new of the moon and all you will get is flowers.

3. Rule of thumb — If it grows above ground, plant it in a new or "waxing" moon. If it grows below ground, plant it in a dark or "waning" moon.

4. Plow under thistles and the like on a full moon and they won't grow back.

5. A blurry moon means "water": don't plant. Corn will be smutty and potatoes will get large, but rot.

6. "Harvest-Moon" is too late for the market.

Great-grandpa was Pennsylvania German and you should understand that they had rules and superstitions for just about every aspect of life. These are the same people who brought us, "Der schnuppe los zu waerre, rich dreimol in der schu." (Translation, "To cure a cold, sniff three times into your shoe.") Those listed above were the few which rural DeWitt of 1912 found acceptable.

Some other agricultural "rules" common to his culture which he probably knew but forgot (or tried once and was politely asked not to repeat) include:

"To be successful in raising flowering plants, steal the slips."

"Flax will grow tall if you show it your buttocks."

"A woman will loose her husband if she transplants parsley."

"When sowing radish seeds repeat: 'As long as my arm and as big as my backside.'"

"Cutworms will not destroy the young corn if the ploughshare is greased with doughnut fat before beginning to plough."

"Never thank anyone for plants for the garden; they will not grow if you do."

"Urinate into the hole where you expect to plant parsley or it won't grow."

It's logic such as this that makes me say, "I'm Pennsylvania-German" and I can't help it."

P.S. Attention DeWitt natives, shame on all of you. Only one person, Bonnie Parker (a relative new-comer I might add) questioned the headline of my article May 4. Joe's Tavern was built in 1842, not 1848 and "still stands proudly today"??? To Bonnie and the rest, you can stop driving around town looking for it. It stood on the southwest corner of Bridge and Main but burned to the ground in 1930. I didn't happen to read the article or I would have corrected it a while ago. I don't have to read these things; that's your job.

Coin laments passing on of family home

By KEN COIN

I saw the smoke curling up above the tree tops across the field this morning and knew what it was — the fire department was burning my an old house north of the cemetery. Much as I like a good fire I wasn't in the mood to go and watch. I don't blame the new owner for wanting it out of the way; the past few years had not been kind to the old place. It was a much debated issue within my family in the past year whether or not to buy it and either fix it up or tear it down to put it out of its misery and save ourselves the heartache of watching it die a slow, ungracious death.

It was called "Peach Hill", the home of the Christian Kauffman family, when my grandparents bought it in 1923. It cost them $2,000 and Woodruff Bros. Bank held the mortgage. At 10 percent down, they had to borrow from family to meet the down payment. It was sorely in need of repair at the time, but they were young and ignored the kind comments regarding how much potential it had and began transforming into a comfortable home.

My grandmother's Grandfather Krebel had been one of the carpenters who worked on building the house in the 1870's. Either in the design or the execution something went wrong and the two story portion quickly took a decided lean to the north. At the time my grandparents bought it the house had no plaster on the walls, only practical wood planking; no electricity (that wouldn't come until 1937); no furnace, only two stoves; no running water except a hand-pump out the back door (an indoor bathroom wouldn't appear until about 1950) and the yard was a conglomeration of chicken coop, pig sty, smokehouse, barn, garden, outhouse and an orchard that had long since seen its prime.

The house had two doors, front and back. The front door was virtually painted shut. If you knocked at this one you were obviously a door-to-door salesman, an evangelist or a tax assessor and you might just as well get back into the car that brought you because it was too much effort to get that door open only to have to slam it in your face again. Now the back door, that was another story. It seemed to open by itself and wish you right in, saying, "Don't bother knocking, c'mon in!"

The first thing to greet you inside the back door was a Maytag wringer washer. This was your fair warning that these were unpretentious people who expected nothing but the same from you. If you were looking for elegance you were at the wrong house and if you thought for one minute that you had a chance of impressing anyone here, Tom and Matie could bring you back to reality in a heartbeat. But, if you were looking for good company, good food, fast-paced cards and life-long friendship, this was the place.

Their house was small and simple, an honest reflection of the people who lived in it; only two bedrooms, a kitchen and living room. It was not set-up with entertaining in mind but like an old girdle it seemed to expand to retain a comfort-level. If there were more than 12 for Progressive Euchre someplace could be found to set up another card table. And the round oak table in the center of the kitchen, the heart of the house, had an extra leaf nearby in case you dropped by at dinner time. Calling ahead would have been an insult to my grandparents. Of course it was ok to drop by. If you didn't know it was okay, you didn't know them very well.

Fifty years in this house created a lot of happy memories but when I walked through its empty rooms recently I found it dirty and abused. It had nothing more to offer me; I had seen it at its best. I could have done a complete overhaul on the torn-up old house; I've tackled worse. And with little effort I could just about put back most of the furnishings like they were 30 years ago. But for what? Grandma's not going to sit on the steps to crack the Hickory nuts; Grandpa's not going to keep the lawn manicured and the Sunday Night Supper Club isn't going to come over for pot-luck and cards.

It was hard for me to envision me and my family moving into a house so small. I mean — come on; five rooms, two closets and one bath for four people? We'd kill each other. Besides, I have high expectations. I think we need a living room, dining room, kitchen, several baths, three bedrooms, family room, laundry room, a full basement, an office for my computer and books, a guest room, a play room for the kids...the list goes on.

I don't know what my Grandparent's expectations were when they bought the house in 1923. For that matter, I don't know what their expectations were at any point in their lives. I never asked. But apparently this small old house met their expectations just fine; they called it home for 50 years. But if their expectations for their home were anything like mine, they never achieved it and, ironically, I'm very envious. And now, though it's gone, it still serves as a relentless lesson to me that a house is only a shell and no matter how large or small, new or old, plain or fancy, it cannot affect the quality of the real home inside.

Vacations in DeWitt have changed over the years

By KEN COIN

Vacations are nothing new. DeWitt people have been taking them for years. Early letters of the pioneers tell of trips by foot and packet boats back east to visit friends and relatives. The well-to-do of later generations were no strangers to the Centennial Exposition of 1876 at Philadelphia and later, world fairs. But our current concept of a vacation - a week of camping or a cottage at the lake - that's something that developed in this century.

Exactly 75 years ago this week, two young women from DeWitt, Bertha Lennemann and my grandmother Matie Staub, took an excursion to Houghton Lake. Now, you may say, "Houghton Lake? Big deal!". But to them it was a big deal. Neither had ever before been so far away from home and Houghton Lake at that time (1918) was like the edge of the earth and took just about as long to get to. I made the mistake of once asking my grandmother if they went by car or by buggy. How was I to know? They drove a buggy, at home didn't they? But she impatiently assured me that this was a first class vacation and that they traveled by motor car.

The trip there was an all-day affair on dirt roads, which included many stops for fuel, water and, according to my grandmother, getting out and pushing the car. The car had no radio and no air conditioning except for the fact that it had no side windows. The young women had to wear hats, because they were out in public, and to keep their long dresses clean and dust free they wore cotton car coats or "dusters".

The south shore of Houghton Lake at that time consisted of a small scattering of cottages, a few stores and livery barns to give it the distinction of being a "town". One of the cottages was owned by Bertha's aunt and uncle and it was here that they stayed. It was small and simple but distinguished itself for the next 60 some years as the cottage with the stuffed deer standing on the front porch. It had all the comforts of home: an outdoor hand pump, an outhouse and rocking chairs on the porch. The neighborhood consisted of a little enclave of DeWitt families. Besides the Staub's there were the Case and Clayton families, with the Lerg's nearby and the Martin's planning on joining them.

Their daily agenda consisted of fishing at all hours, blueberry picking, swimming (actually they called it "bathing"). It was sort of hard to swim in bloomers, boat rides (oar powered), croquet, laundry (laundry?), a lot of card playing (Pedro, of course) and ample visiting. The suntans weren't intentional but they got them anyway on the few areas of skin decency allowed them to expose.

In a letter home, my grandmother reported that she and Bertha had attended a local Saturday night dance. Both girls had attended enough DeWitt dances to be pretty good judges of high-class entertainment but they rated this one a "bum thing". But, Matie conceded, "Can't blame the barbarians that live out in these woods... for what they don't know." Sounding a bit uppity aren't you Miss world-traveler?

So, as I prepare to go on vacation this week I wonder - in 75 years will my grandchildren look at my vacation pictures and laugh at where I went, how I got there and what I did? I guess I'll deserve it: "What goes 'round comes 'round".

Community

Bertha Lennemann was one of DeWitt's "Grand Old Ladies"

By Ken Coin

Last week DeWitt lost one of its finest assets with the passing of Bertha Lennemann; truly one of the last of DeWitt's "Grand Old Ladies". Now, I know she would protest at such a pretentious title but grand old ladies and fine old gentlemen being somewhat of a rare commodity these days, it would do us well to take note of them whenever possible.

We did take note of Bertha Lennemann in 1982, when the City of DeWitt proclaimed her its first annual "Citizen of the Year". Though barely five foot tall, Bertha came through head and shoulders above all others. Having spent the better part of her life behind the scenes of community affairs, she was genuinely surprised that anyone had taken note of her contributions. That was her mode of operation - do what you can, when it's needed, without recognition.

Bertha was born on a Maple Rapids farm in 1902. Her parents, Carl and Minnie Staub spent many years as tenant farmers until the winter of 1912 when they purchased the old Norris farm two miles north of DeWitt on Chadwick Road. After a March snowfall they moved their belongings down from Maple Rapids to DeWitt with two teams of draft horses and two bob sleighs - two trips for all their household furnishings, livestock, tools and grain. Her father drove one team while Bertha's two older brothers, Jim and Tom drove the other.

For several years Bertha attended the one-room Brown School north of town, followed by two years at DeWitt, graduating (10th grade) with the class of 1917 and later attended Lansing Business University.

In 1923 she was married to John "Jack" Lennemann who died in 1976. For over fifty years she made her home on Scott Street, raising four children and contributing what she could for the betterment of her church and community.

I had the very great pleasure of knowing Bertha as a neighbor, an aunt and a friend. If you did not know her I would hope that in your own lifetime you would know at least one person equally kind, gentle and optimistic. The sheer joy of her conversations is what I'll remember most for it was ingrained deep within her to continually seek out the good and leave fault where it lay, for others to find.

Of history, local and family, she was not much of a storyteller but she could add such clarity to scenes and events of long ago and personal details of people long passed away.

Bertha constantly reminded me that as family and community change, life remains the same. We are all part of a continuing spiral where little children go full circle to become elderly grandparents. And along the way, it is the blessing of life, for those who are able, to help others struggling with that journey.

The last time I talked with Bertha she told me that she had lately been thinking about a childhood friend. When she was about eight years old this girlfriend took sick and died. Bertha was naturally upset that her playmate had died, but numbed when she was told that she was to be one of the pall bearers.

"Can you imagine it?", she asked me, still surprised 85 years later. "Six little girls no older than ten carrying her coffin." She said that throughout her life she had occasionally reflected on that childhood incident, always puzzled by why she was asked and how she managed to do it. "Her folks asked...so, I did it," she concluded.

That could well sum up Bertha's philosophy of life: regardless of the circumstance, do what needs to be done, when it needs to be done, without thought of recognition. Well done, Bertha... a very fine piece of work.

Long-ago veterans had local ties

There were many veterans of the War of 1812 who came to the DeWitt area in the early years of its settlement. Some stayed briefly before moving on, others remained and eventually died here. Several became prominent settlers while others lived out an obscure life; their former military service unrecorded.

Unlike veterans of all later wars (with the exception of the war with Mexico, 1846-48) veterans of the War of 1812 formed no local organizations. As a result, much of the information of these men's military past has been forgotten. Likewise, even many of the names have been lost.

The following are some veterans of this war who have a recorded association with early DeWitt.

Perhaps the most notable veteran of early DeWitt was its founder, Capt. David Scott. He was born in Litchfield, Conn., Nov. 1, 1779, and was reportedly a captain in the 23rd U.S. Infantry. He married Eunice Forbes of Shoreham, Vt., in 1801. They settled at DeWitt in 1833 and it was here that he died, May 7, 1851. He and his wife are buried in the DeWitt cemetery.

Col. Thomas Lee was born Dec. 20, 1774, in Hudson, N.Y. He came to DeWitt at a relatively early date but no information concerning his life here has been confirmed. His wife's maiden name was Asenath Winants and they had at least one son, George W. Lee. Col. Lee died at DeWitt, Dec. 2, 1852, and is buried in the DeWitt cemetery.

Barna Allen (also record as Burma or Barney Allen) was born in Washington Co., N.Y., Nov. 12, 1786 (?). He settled south and west of DeWitt in 1837 and was among the earliest members of the DeWitt Baptist Church in 1842. He died March 4, 1847, and is buried in the DeWitt cemetery beside his wife, Betsy (Heath) Allen who died in 1841. Their son George W. Allen became a prominent settler of section 19, this township.

The tombstone of Enos Silsbe in the DeWitt cemetery has been engraved (at a later date) "PVT. N.Y. Militia, War of 1812." He died Nov. 7, 1845, at the age of 48. He is buried with his wife, Abigail, and two daughters who died at an early age. Other than these facts, nothing further is known.

David Olin Sr. came to DeWitt at an early date, reportedly in 1837. His name is frequently mentioned in the early histories of this area but as he had a son by the same name it is nearly impossible to distinguish who is being credited. David Sr. is credited with building the Baptist Meeting House on north Bridge street and one of the early schools at Gunnison's corners. He is also listed among the early owners of DeWitt's Clinton House hotel. He died here on August 25, 1857, at the age of 62, and is buried in the DeWitt cemetery.

Henry Chappell (also spelled Chappel) is believed to have been an early settler south and west of DeWitt. He died here on May 28, 1861, at the age of 72 and was originally buried in the former Goodrich cemetery on Schavey road. His grave, along with several others, was removed to the DeWitt cemetery at a later date.

James Stickles, an early settler of southern DeWitt township, died August 28, 1876, at the age of 79. He is said to have been buried in the Hurd cemetery beside his wife Lucy.

Daniel Ferguson Jr. (1794-1864) is believed to have come to the DeWitt settlement in 1834 along with his father, Daniel Sr. and several brothers. Most of this large family, including Daniel Jr., eventually settled in Olive township near Muskrat Lake. Specific references to him are confusing due to he and his father having the same name. He was probably buried in either the Alward or Merrithew cemeteries, though no connection to either has been located.

Dr. Hiram Stowell (whose veteran status has not yet been firmly established) was a native of Cayuga Co.,

Historic DeWitt

By Kenneth Coln

N.Y. He and his family came to DeWitt in 1837 and settled on the Looking Glass river, several miles upriver from the Scott settlement. He was elected Clinton county's first Judge of Probate in 1839 and afterwards came to the village of DeWitt where he built an impressive home on the northeast corner of Main and Franklin. He died here on August 25, 1857, at the age of 62 and was buried in the DeWitt cemetery.

According to records of the Daughters of 1812, Porter Briggs is said to have lived in the DeWitt area but this has not been confirmed by local records. It is possible that he was connected with the later Briggs family of southern DeWitt township.

'Marching Through Georgia' Not Just a Song to George Stimson

Stimson.

Clinton Veteran, Buried At Dewitt Oct. 22, Fought In Many Battles

George W. Stimson was born July 14, 1842, in Lenawee county, Michigan, the son of John and Isabel (Biggs) Stimson, and passed away at his home in Olive township, Tuesday, Oct. 20, at 1:45 p. m. at the age of 94 years, 3 months and 6 days, after an illness of 9 days with heart trouble.

Mr. Stimson served in the Union Army during the Civil War, being enrolled June 14, 1863, at St. Louis, Mo., as a private in Co. H, 11th Missouri Cavalry. He was detailed as orderly at headquarters and spent four months in this way. He was promoted to quartermaster sergeant and so served in some of the hotly-contested battles of the war: Pittsburgh Landing, Tuscumbia, Big Blue, Holley Springs, Little Rock and Ten-Mile Prairie and was with General Sherman on that long march through Georgia, "from Atlanta to the sea." He was granted his honorable discharge July 27, 1865, at New Orleans, Louisiana. He had two brothers in service, John, who died in service, and Francis, who was wounded by a fragment of a shell.

Mr. Stimson was a member of the G. W. Anderson post at Dewitt until it was disbanded, when he transferred to the St. Johns post. By trade he was a carpenter. He was married Dec. 31, 1879, in Olive township to Lucy Rockwell who survives him.

Mr. Stimson was a staunch Republican and took great interest in the township, county, state and national election. He served as postmaster of Merle Beach for a period of years.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

For tho' from out our bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far.
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have cross'd the bar.

The funeral was held at Dewitt Community church Thursday, Oct. 22, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Northrup preaching. The Legionnaires from the Edwin T. Biles Post attended and gave the army regulation service at the grave.

VETERAN OF '61 MUSTERED OUT

Stimson

GEORGE W. STIMSON, 94,
FORMER MERLE BEACH
POSTMASTER, DIES

Military Rites Will Be Held
By American Legion Post
This Afternoon

George W. Stimson, 94, one of the very last of Clinton county's old soldiers, a G. A. R. veteran who served throughout the Civil War, died Tuesday, Oct. 20, at his home in Olive township, six miles south of St. Johns. Hale and hearty almost to the end, he was ill but a few days before his death.

He will be buried with military honors in the Dewitt cemetery this (Thursday) afternoon, following funeral services at the Dewitt Community church with Rev. G. S. Northrup officiating. American Legionnaires from the Edwin T. Stiles post will conduct the rites at the grave.

Possessed of a mental and bodily vigor that greatly belied his advanced age, Mr. Stimson was keenly interested in current affairs. In former times he was a member of the Dewitt G. A. R. post, and when that unit disbanded he transferred to the Charles E. Grisson post at St. Johns, which he also outlived.

From 1900 until the office was discontinued in 1922, he served as Merle Beach postmaster, and the little old post office building still stands at the rear of the Stimson home on the curve of the old St. Johns-Lansing road a mile south of Muskrat Lake.

Born in Lenawee county, Michigan, July 14, 1842, George W. Stimson came to this county many years ago. Although not old enough to vote when the Civil War broke out, he enlisted and served through several enlistment periods, ending up with Co. H 11th Missouri Regiment. After the war he followed the carpenter trade and continued at work until a few years before his death.

In 1870 he was united in marriage to Lucy E. Rockwell, who survives him, together with a number of other relatives and old friends.
